About 6 o'clock on that evening he went to his father's room, and found him walking the floor, with his mouth and clothes very bloody. Mr. Goregeon said that, not feeling well, he went home from work and threw himself on a bed, but had no recollections of firing the shots. It is supposed that [illegible] delirious [illegible] he seized a revolver lying on a table near his bed and unconsciously discharged the contents into his mouth. Deceased was a native of Canada, 46 years of age, and leaves a wife and family in this city.

Steamboat Collision.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—On her way from Vallejo to this city yesterday the steamer Yosemite collided with the sternwheel steamer Reform. Little damage was done to the Yosemite, but the Reform began to fill at once. The passengers and baggage were transferred to the Yosemite, and the latter vessel attempted to bring the Reform into port, but in a few moments she sank in seven feet of water. She was owned by Nelson & Anderson.

On her evening trip about 10 o'clock last night the Yosemite fouled with the bark Nicholas Thayer, running slowly at the time near the wharf. The jibboom of the bark run through the upper works of the steamer just forward of the paddle box on the port side and jammed fast. At last accounts they retained that position. It is hoped they will get clear on the turn of the tide. The passengers of the steamer were taken ashore in boats.

OREGON.

The city of Salem is $4,531 25 in debt.

Albany has now about 30 new buildings in course of construction.

W. W. Piper has been chosen architect by the capitol commissioners.

There remain 60,000 bushels of wheat in the Farmers' warehouse in Albany.

James Marks and R. M. Robertson were ordained elders in the United Presbyterian church at Albany, on Tuesday of this week.

Hon. E. L. Bristow has resigned his position as one of the capitol commissioners. The Governor has not yet appointed his successor.

Mayor Brown, of Albany, last Monday administered the iron-clad oath to his successor, Mayor Froman, and has now retired to the quiet shades of the sanctum sanctorum.

The Home Manufacturing Company held a meeting at Salem last Wednesday but a majority of the stock not being represented, an adjournment was had until the first Tuesday in February.

The Linn County Agricultural Society held an election for directors, at Albany, on the 7th inst., with the following result: C. P. Burkhart, J. Wheeler, F. Parton, J. A. Crawford, A. N. Arnold, Jesse Parish and Allen Parker.

On Tuesday, 3d inst., Capt. Nespen, of the Twilight, was washed overboard off the tug Fearless on the Coos Bay bar. The mate of the tug made a desperate effort to save him. The unfortunate man was seen for twenty minutes, he being a good swimmer and capable of keeping up some time.

The Albany Democrat says: "There are 200,000 bushels of wheat yet in store at Harrisburg. When the great McKenzie and Albany canal is made we will have all the wheat of the county stored in this city, which will insure its early shipment and a much greater profit to the producer."

A report by Geo. A. Edes, Esq., who was appointed by the county court to examine into the financial condition of Marion county, shows the county to have been $47,104 75 in debt on the 1st inst., and $4,142 02 in the treasury. The same report shows that from July 1, 1870, to July 1, 1874, C. N. Terry, the then county judge, drew from the treasury of the county the sum of $1,049 15 in excess of the salary allowed by law.

The Coos Bay News of the 6th inst. says: "Unless the blockaded fleet of sailing vessels now in port gets to sea within a week we shall see pretty hard times. The coal mines are all idle, having no vessels to load and their bunkers being all full. The schooner Alaska was loaded at the Newport chute last week, but her cargo was hardly an average day's product of that mine. The Henryville mine is run only by its laborers, who are working by the day, whereas miners get paid by the ton. The sawmills are running on full time, but unless something can be got to sea, they will soon find themselves overstocked with lumber. So it behooves people to take things easy until they see how soon the bar-bound fleet gets out."

LITTLE JOHNNY'S COMPOSITION ON THE CRICKETS.—The cricket don't need so much disciption as the ephalent, 'cause he is so much littler. He sings on the harth, but it is more like squeakin, and he can jump wen you catch him. The tenkittle and the cricket sings to gether, and their fokes in stories is happy but give me a fiddle. Their is a game called cricket, but it isn't like the real cricket a bit; 'cause it ain't spry, and hurts your legs if you don't tie 'em likesore fingers. Wen the cricket is a-sittin still and mindin' his own bisniss he looks like he was balancin' hisself between two step-ladders. Crickets is cangaroos in a former stait of existence.

"Only a woman's hair," remarked Spivens, musingly, as he gazed down into his plate; "a red-headed woman at that! It may be very sentimental, but it somehow gets away with my appetite."

LETTER FROM "NORTHWEST."

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

HARRISBURG, Jan. 7, 1875.

The weather continues remarkably favorable for farming operations. Plowing is in active operation; grubbing is carried on extensively, and improved cultivation is observable in many parts of the valley. The low price of wheat makes money scarce among farmers, collections slow and payments difficult by merchants.

JUNCTION.

The city of large expectations, is one of the most prosperous of the railroad towns between Portland and Roseburg. New and good buildings are going up all the time, and the demand is still for more. The town is the center of a good agricultural district. There are six warehouses for storing wheat, and there will be 225,000 bushels of wheat sent by railroad from the last harvest. A large portion of this wheat is sold. The present price is 55 cents a bushel. There are several good stores, of which Smith, Brasfield & Co.'s may be taken as a favorable representative. Mr. J. H. Berry's hotel is much enlarged, very comfortable, and a table provided in a manner worthy of general adoption by other hotels, not excepting Portland. A good district school and a neat church attracts families to the town. The expectation that the westside railroad will be completed and make its connection with the eastside railroad at Junction, encourages the leading citizens to hope that it will be, in due time, a large and prosperous town.

MONROE

Is located twelve miles west of Junction. It is an old town and considerably dilapidated. There are a few rather neat cottages. Mr. C. O. C. Woodcock has a large general store, a well assorted stock and successfully conducted. He has, by moderate charges and honorable dealing, secured the confidence of the farmers of the district and increased his business twofold during the past year. The water-power by means of the Long Tom river is considerable. Mr. Thomas Rader takes advantage of it to run a grist-mill successfully, which is a great accommodation to the farmers.

THE MONROE GRANGE

Is among the largest in the State; it numbers about 110 farmers. The members are distinguished for their intelligence, industry, co-operating for the general good, and for the successful results of their industry. A large number are old settlers who have risen from very limited means to great comfort, affluence and influence. Not the least remarkable of this class are the farmers on Long Tom river, and not a few of [illegible] are ladies of cultivation and refinement. Of both classes Mr. and Mrs. James Marbin, residing on the "Irish Bend," may be taken as representatives.

A number of the leading farmers in this district are shipping their wheat direct to Liverpool. After a lengthened conversation and remonstrance with some of them on the subject, they are determined to run all the risks of the business until the Portland merchants pay them the same price as is paid in San Francisco, to which they consider themselves entitled if fairly treated. They will not rest satisfied until the difference of from 18 to 21 cents a bushel between the San Francisco and Portland prices is removed. There are two sides to this question. The grievance will soon rectify itself. In the meantime it will be prudent for the Portland shippers to give the subject early and deliberate consideration.

HARRISBURG

Does not exhibit signs of rapid growth; it holds its own, but considering its advantages of railroad and river communication, and being the center of a good agricultural district, its progress should be much greater. There will be at least 200,000 bushels of wheat shipped from here from the harvest of 1874, a large portion of which is still unsold. There is a large trading business done in the stores of Smith, Brasfield & Co., S. May, Seller & Co., and W. H. Baber.

THE HARRISBURG GRANGE

Meets here at stated periods; it has a large membership and works harmoniously. Neither the members of this grange nor the Monroe grange commit the mistake of organizing grange stores. The stores in existence meet all their wants, and when they purchase for cash or on short time, and make prompt payments, they can buy on as good terms as at any grange store, run no risks of losing their capital, and save themselves much trouble and anxiety. Competition, and not monopoly, is the life of trade. It is the direct interest of farmers to encourage the former in all its forms.

The steamer Ohio came up the river yesterday afternoon, loaded 100 tons of wheat by Seller & Co., and left for Portland this morning, drawing only 24 inches of water. She seems well adapted for the Wallamet river during low water. Similar boats of light draft is one of the immediate requirements of this river to meet the increased productions of the districts within shipping distance of the river.

NORTHWEST.

THE TERRITORIES.

Santa Fe has had three days of sleighing.

Coal is $3 50 per ton in Colorado Springs.

Salt Lake boasts of 200 new houses this year.

Money is advertised to loan at 11 per cent. in Denver.

Hartman Gooch, a veteran of the Mexican war, and a resident ever since of New Mexico, died at Santa Fe the other day.

The editor of the Albuquerque Review wastes a column of white paper to prove that the Pueblo Indians are not descendants of Montezuma.

Riley Morse, a Mormon preacher, was arrested at Beaver, Utah, last Saturday, for shooting four times at a saloon keeper named Jacob Harris.

The Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company have purchased that portion of the Deseret line between Salt Lake and Ogden, thus making the former a through line from Salt Lake to all points east and west.

Utah is making rapid progress in railways this season. Iron is arriving in Salt Lake City for the Utah Southern, and an army of men are at work south of Provo, casting up the grade for the ties and rails. The Utah Western has received sixteen car-loads of iron, and the balance to lay the first twenty-two miles is between Salt Lake City and Omaha.

Paradise or the other place is to be recruited shortly by a Mexican named Refrugio Revera, convicted of the killing of a woman named Refugia Marquez, at Tucson, Arizona, last July. The brute stabbed her in nine places with a knife. He is to be executed some time in February. He is a hardened wretch, and there is no hope of his conversion. After the judge had passed sentence of death, the culprit laughingly requested that he be hung with a pretty, painted rope, and, placing his hand to his throat, remarked to the court: "You see, judge, my neck is adapted to the business to which it is sentenced."

HYMENEAL FESTIVITIES AT WASHINGTON.—A round of dinners is to be given to Senator Jones, of Nevada, who is expected here soon with his bride, and the dozen or more of our belles, (each one of whom had "great expectations last winter,) who had hoped to be the bride of the Senator, are very anxious to see their fortunate rival. Other entertainments will be given in honor of the bride of ex-Assistant Secretary William E. Chandler, who was the daughter of Senator John P. Hale, of New Hampshire, and who used to be a great favorite in society, when her father was in Congress.

With the reassembling of Congress the season will commence, but it will be necessarily brief, as on the 10th of February the matin bells will summon the faithful to Lenten devotions.—Wash. Cor. (Dec. 6,) N. Y. Times.

RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

FULL TEXT OF THE BILL WHICH PASSED THE HOUSE THURSDAY.

The following is the full text of the bill reported to the Senate Dec. 21, by Mr. Sherman from the committee of finance, to provide for the resumption of specie payments:

Be it enacted, etc., that the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required as rapidly as practicable to cause to be coined at the mints of the United States silver coins of the denominations of ten, twenty-five and fifty cents, of standard value, and to issue them in redemption of an equal number and amount of fractional currency of similar denominations; or, at his discretion, he may issue such silver coins through the mints, subtreasuries, public depositaries and postoffices of the United States; and upon such issue he is hereby authorized and required to redeem an equal amount of such fractional currency until the whole amount of such fractional currency outstanding shall be redeemed.

SECTION 2. That so much of section 3,524 of the revised statutes of the United States as provides for a charge of one-fifth of one per centum for converting standard gold bullion into coin is hereby repealed, and hereafter no charge shall be made for that service.

SEC. 3. That section 5,777 of the revised statutes of the United States limiting the aggregate amount of the circulating notes of national banking associations be and is hereby repealed, and each existing banking association may increase its circulating notes in accordance with the existing law without respect to said aggregate limit, and new banking associations may be organized in accordance with the existing law without respect to such aggregate limit, and the provisions of the law for the withdrawal and redistribution of national bank currency among the several States and Territories are hereby repealed; and whenever and so often as circulating notes shall be issued to any such banking association so increasing its capital or circulating notes, or so newly organized as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem the legal tender United States notes in excess only of $300,000,000 to the amount of eighty per cent. of the sum of national bank notes so issued to any such banking association as aforesaid, and to continue such redemption as such circulating notes are issued, until there shall be outstanding the sum of $300,000,000 of such legal tender United States notes and no more. And on and after the 1st day of January, 1879, the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem in coin the U.S. legal tender notes then outstanding on their presentation for redemption at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States in the city of New York, in sums of not less than $50. And to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to prepare and provide for the redemption in this act, authorized or required, he is authorized to use any surplus revenues from time to time in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to issue, sell and dispose of, at not less than par in coin, either of the description of bonds of the United States described in the act of Congress approved July 14, 1870, entitled "an act to authorize the refunding of the national debt," with like qualities, privileges and exemptions to the extent necessary to carry this act into effect, and to use the proceeds thereof for the purposes aforesaid.

And all provisions of law inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

ABOUT CATS.

SOME OF THE WONDERFUL THINGS TO BE SEEN IN CRYSTAL PALACE.

The London Times, in describing the Crystal Palace cat show, says: "Including the selling class, the cats number fifty divisions, and there are 287 entries, containing 350 animals, from the heaviest, a great and beautiful taddy, weighing fifteen pounds twelve ounces, to the tiny blind kittens born, yesterday, at No. 201 in the North Nave. They are all arranged in airy pens made of galvanized wire, except one fierce-looking animal, which was pronounced by the judges to be not a cat at all, and has been left as she came, in a bird cage. The animal is described as a paradoxure, coming from Mongolia. Her exhibitor resides at Abbey Wood, near Plumstead, in Kent. Her fierce appearance confirms his statement that when turned loose she puts a speedy end to any vermin which may be on the premises. There was this year only one tortoise shell and white cat, but the brown tabbies, the silver tabbies, the red tabbies, were all well represented. A black tabby made her appearance, and took a prize for her unusual color. In this class, the beautiful fur of 'Mymie,' a not very good-tempered Siamese, put her first. The short-haired black Tom, who appeared prettiest or more correctly ugly to the judges, is named Topsy, and in the unusual colors in this short-haired class a tom, whose fur is a beautiful slate color, took the prize. Next comes a class for the numerous monstrosities with six toes, extra claws and oddly speckled cats. The Manx cats here are successful. In most of the cats the eyes are of a topaz color, which in the night would gleam green; but one or two white cats have one topaz and the other a pale blue, or the same color as all young kittens' eyes. But in the classes for white cats, two blue eyes make their appearance, and the pretty mother, No. 102, which [illegible] the first prize for short-haired white cats, is justly described as having bright blue eyes. Mr. Darwin says in the 'Origin of Species' that the white cats with blue eyes are generally deaf, but in a later edition he confines the assertion to the males. It is interesting to try the effect of talking to the white blue-eyed cats at presents at Sydenham. Some of them, by their imperviousness, appear to confirm the statement of their deafness. Others, and at least one male, will be found to prick up their ears at once upon the voice being used. Shaggy lion-like Persian cats took the prizes for long-haired black and white, and an Angora tabby and Angora buff take prizes in other classes. A red tabby, with six claws, takes the prize for long-haired tabby shes. In the heavy classes, the weight of nineteen pounds, which has been approached at previous shows was not reached, but 'Smut,' imaginatively valued by his owner at £1,000, takes a prize with fifteen pounds twelve ounces, and 'Ned' weighs fifteen pounds four ounces. Two white short-haired cats weigh thirteen pounds eight ounces each.

HOW HE LOST HIS SEAT.—Yesterday morning a nice young man got into a car on the Dayton Shore Line Railroad, and saw to his delight the only vacant seat in the coach was by the side of a young lady acquaintance. He reached for that seat with joyous strides, and her eyes answered his delighted looks. But just as he got there, an elderly party from the other end of the car waltzed up the aisle and dropped into the coveted seat. The young man approached more slowly, and accosted the young lady: "How is your brother?" he asked, "is he able to get out?" "Oh, yes," she said. "Will he be very badly marked?" he continued; and the old gentleman grew suddenly interested, "Oh, no," said the fair deceiver; "with the exception of a few small pits on his forehead, you would never know he had ever had it." "Were you not afraid of taking it?" the young man went on, while the old gentleman broke out in a cold perspiration. "Not at all," she replied; "I had been vaccinated, you know." The seat was vacated instantly, two young hearts beat as half a dozen, and the prattle of "nice talk" strewed that part of the car, while a gray-haired old man scowled upon them from the hard accommodation of the wood-box.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

A STATUE OF HARRY CLAY.—Government has erected here statues of Washington, Jackson, Scott, Lincoln, and Farragut, and now Gov. McCormick, the delegate from Arizona has introduced a bill to erect a statue of Zachary Taylor. A movement is to be inaugurated in a short time to add to these, by individual subscriptions, a statue of Henry Clay. Where can such an eligible site be found in the Republic as the metropolis, which was the theater of his great achievements and the place of his death? The great Commoner was not only the pride of the House of Representatives as the most distinguished Speaker it ever had, of the Senate as its great orator, and in the Cabinet as the ablest counselor of the pure and able administration of John Quincy Adams, but here in Washington he was always at home among his friends. Independently of the brilliancy of his intellect, they were attracted to him by his sympathy in their welfare, by the frankness of his heart, and by his eminent social qualities, always welcome here. Of course the old line Whigs of New York who still live will contribute liberally toward this statue.—Wash. Cor. N. Y. Times.

NOW LET'S HAVE THE TRUTH.

[From the Albany (N. Y.) Journal (Adm. Rep.)]

Speaker Blaine has appointed Messrs. Geo. F. Hoar of Massachusetts, Wheeler of New York, Frye of Maine, Foster of Ohio, Phelps of New Jersey, Robinson of Illinois and Potter of New York as a select committee to investigate the affairs of Louisiana and the condition of things in the Southern States.

This is a strong and weighty committee. It has independence, character and ability. It is made up of men in whose honesty, fairness and judgment the country has confidence. Mr. Hoar is emphatically a man with a mind of his own. Mr. William A. Wheeler is one of the soundest and truest men in Congress. Mr. Frye is above the average. Mr. Foster is the plucky little fellow who fought Butler and Sanborn. Mr. Phelps is rather precocious and ambitious, and has the habit of writing his name William Walter; but he is certainly given to plain speaking and will cover up no wrongs. Mr. Clarkson Potter is an able and fair representative of the minority. Mr. Robinson, the other minority member, is the least known of the lot, and the only one about whom there can be doubt. The conclusions of such a body, based upon a searching examination, must be respected and accepted. If the country cannot trust such men, it can't trust anybody.

Now then; with so excellent a committee, let us go the bottom of this business and bring out the whole truth. What is the real state of the case in Louisiana? What are the real facts about the Southern outrages? What is the real temper of the Southern people? What is the real nature of the situation and what the true remedy to be applied? We have groped long enough amid contradictions and confusion and uncertainty. There have been some commanding facts which clear-headed observers, capable of just discrimination, have accepted as significant of general tendencies. But at the same time there has been such a din of misrepresentation, such a clangor of contradiction, that the country has scarcely known what to believe or whether to credit its own senses. What it wants is to get behind this cloud of bewilderment and down to the hard-pan of facts. A statement to which Messrs. Hoar, Wheeler and their colleagues will put their names will carry the confidence of the people.

We hope, therefore, that this committee will take hold of the question in thorough earnest, and give us the truth, wherever it may point, or whatever side it may tend to help. The matter is too grave to be treated as a mere shibboleth of partisanship. It presents a profound problem, vitally affecting the prosperity and well-being of the country. What ought to be done in the Louisiana business? What are the general relations of the two races? What are the facts about the reported outrages, and how far do they reflect the general temper? In a word, what is the truth about the Southern question, and what action does it require? If the committee will examine and review this subject in a candid, dispassionate and statesmanlike spirit, it will render inestimable service to the country.

SMALL TALK

"He provoked me into loving him," was a Rochester girl's excuse for engaging herself to man whom she had always professed to hate.

Sallie Morris, a pretty Newark girl, is a "mind reader." She said to a bashful beau the other night, "La! I believe you are going to kiss me." She was right.

"I can afford to be a little extravagant now, as my husband's been elected to the Legislature," said an Indiana woman as she ordered six bars of soap to be sent up."

One reason why female telegraph operators are not more numerous, is because if one of them wished to go to a ball she'd up and go, even if the President's message was coming over the wires.

In Lowell, the other day, a discontented mill girl said to her boarding-house mistress who was lamenting the fate of a boarder who had eloped with a scalawag grocery keeper: "You keep us on bull beef at $4 a week, and then expect us to be contented angels."

Sang a young maid while sweeping:

"To night, to-night my lover will come,
And drive from my soul all care;
Arrayed in the dress that pleases him best
A simple red rose in my hair."

Wonder what her spring costume amounts to if that is her dress for winter?

Only the other day, I heard a pretty and very attractive girl, from New York, declare in a defiant manner: "I am not going to alter my behavior to please these Parisians. I am an American, and I'll do as I choose. I know what I am, and my friends know. And if any Frenchman offers me an insult, my father will horsewhip him. I go where and how I like in Paris. I have never been molested, and am pretty sure I shan't be, either.—Paris Letter.

The intuition of the Treasury girls serves them well in the counterfeit business; and Gen. Spinner, who has had 12 years' experience in the work, says they are worth ten times as much as men for such business. "A man always has a reason for a counterfeit," says the General; "forty, may-be, but he is wrong half the time. A woman never has a reason. She says 'tis counterfeit because it is counterfeit, and she's always right—though she couldn't tell how she found out if she were to be hung for it."

SATURDAY MORNING, JANUARY 9, 1875.

THE REAL ISSUE.

To the people of the United States it matters little whether Kellogg or McEnery was legally elected Governor of Louisiana in 1872. The contest between them was purely local up to the time that the Lynch Returning Board, made up of Kellogg's most servile adherents, attempted to count in all the Republican candidates for Congress, and stock the Legislature with Kelloggites, in order that Pinchback might be elected United States Senator. Even then the people of the Northern States were interested only in so far as their representatives in Congress had to do with the election and qualification of Pinchback and his associates. The Louisiana case first arrested the attention of the North, when a United States District Judge, performing circuit duty, issued a midnight order commanding the Marshal of his court to take possession of the State House (the Mechanics' Institute, in fact), oust the Legislature then in session, proclaim Wm. Pitt Kellogg Governor, and seat a body of men whom he (Kellogg) declared to be the Legislature. It was known—Durell himself admits, in a published defense which we have at hand—that the election returns on which Kellogg based his claim were never in his court. He never saw them: they were in the possession of McEnery, another claimant of the office of Governor. On an ex parte statement of what the returns were [illegible] to be, furnished by Kellogg's bill in chancery, the famous midnight order was based. Herein the people of other States saw a branch of the Federal Government employed to sustain a man of whose election there was, to say the least, reason for very grave doubt. And while the corruption of a United States court was very generally deplored, yet even up to this point the people were only momentarily interested. The details of the case were so dry and uninviting that the masses speedily left its settlement to Congress. We may note, incidentally, that Congress has, indirectly, a hundred times condemned Durell's midnight order and pronounced adversely on the Kellogg government. It did this, for instance, in refusing Pinchback a seat in the Senate. So far as the Governorship of Louisiana is concerned, the OREGONIAN has always held that Kellogg was a usurper; as to McEnery, it has invariably held that he was not legally elected.

For two years the Louisiana case dragged its slow length along, eliciting little attention save on the part of the press. In November, 1874, a general election was [illegible] held in Louisiana. And although the North could claim no interest in the result, save a patriotic wish to see definitively settled a tedious controversy which threatened the peace and hindered the prosperity of a State, the attention of the whole country centered on Louisiana when it was announced that a Returning Board was defrauding the Conservatives of Louisiana out of a hard-earned victory, by most shameful and [illegible] rulings. Whole parishes were thrown out by the canvassers on the ground of intimidation of negroes, [illegible] which were overrun by United States soldiers on the day of [illegible] out, because they gave Conservative majorities. The iniquity of the [illegible] is plainly shown and forcibly condemned by the Republican [illegible] of the Congressional committee, [illegible] declared that "there [illegible]—as much on one side as the other."

These [illegible] transactions enlisted the sympathy of the North; but the element which was to make the Louisiana controversy a matter of profoundest national concern, affecting New York, Massachusetts, Oregon and every other State equally with Louisiana, was yet wanting. It was supplied by the events of last Monday morning, when an armed body of United States soldiery entered the hall of the Louisiana House of Representatives and at the point of the bayonet arbitrated, in half an hour, a dispute over which the best constitutional lawyers of America had gravely debated for two years. The nation saw its constitution rent in fragments by the sword; the laws and customs of a century trampled under foot in an [illegible] on the republican institutions of a sovereign State. Over all this, the Chief [illegible] from whom, of all others, is to be expected the deepest reverence for law, the profoundest regard for the constitution, viewing with stolid indifference an outrage for which his most conscientious councillors could find no shadow of excuse. If the innovation itself was threatening to liberty, how much more alarming the danger of the foundation of a school in politics out of the army of civil officers who own their allegiance first of all to president—after that to country.

What wonder, then, that from every State in the Union come up protests loud and deep against the assumption of this new prerogative, so utterly foreign to the spirit of our institutions that its like was never contemplated even by the most ardent centralist? What wonder that every [illegible] newspaper in the land is calling on the people to resent this most subtle attack on the rights of States? We hold it a matter of most encouraging import that the people of all the States are willing to make common cause with Louisiana in pursuing to the death a wicked and dangerous heresy. It can not live; because, knowing that if it be tolerated for a moment no State is secure from similar invasion, the people will crush it and its advocates just as surely and effectively as they destroyed Secession.

This is the real issue in the Louisiana outrage. It is not whether Kellogg or McEnery shall be Governor of Louisiana, and no thinking man should allow himself to be blinded with the cry of "rebels" and "secessionists," raised by those who are dependent on the President's favor for bread and butter.

AN ORGAN'S DISGRACE.

The Federal organ in this city has at last discovered that the sentiment of the whole country is against its shameless defense of the Louisiana outrage. It finds that the Louisiana Congressional investigating committee, the best citizens of that State, and the leading journals of the Republican party, are all earnest in denunciation of the wrong. It discovers that men of all shades of religion and politics, both North and South, unite in pronouncing its tales of murder, assassination and intimidation, wretched calumnies. Last Tuesday morning the Bulletin unqualifiedly endorsed the use of the United States army in breaking up the Louisiana legislature, declaring that there was "no other course for the United States officers to pursue." Yesterday morning it said:

> "The interference of the military power in any State government is a matter for the greatest sorrow to the people of the United States; and it is none the less to be regretted that it has happened in the State of Louisiana."

Is there a Republican in Oregon who is not heartily disgusted with such miserable backing and filling on the part of a paper which professes to lead a great party? What reliance can be placed upon the opinions or assertions of a journal which does not know its own mind from one day to another, which shifts with every change of the wind, and owns fidelity to no doctrine save one: to the victors belong the spoils? Out upon such scandalous journalism! It is a disgrace to the State, and a reproach to the party it professes to support.

SPECIMEN BRICKS.

As we elsewhere remark, the question of the economy of Kellogg's administration in Louisiana does not in any wise enter into the merits of the discussion on the legality of Federal interference in the organization of the State Legislature. Kellogg's reputation, be it good or bad, does not form a part of the issue raised by Grant, last Monday, in the forcible dispersion of members, or pretended members, of the lower house of the Louisiana Assembly.

But the administration organ in this city publishes what purports to be an official statement of the financial condition of Louisiana last September. To any one at all acquainted with the infinite skill displayed by party financiers in making disbursements count for receipts, and positive deficiencies assume the aspect of profits, the meagerness of this "statement" is clearly apparent. There is nothing in the so-called "statement," however, to indicate whence it came or who was its author. It might as well be manufactured in the office of the organ.

We happen to have near at hand a forcible argument bearing on the economy of Kellogg's administration, which we present, just as it was given by the New Orleans Picayune of Oct. 6th, as a specimen brick. Here is the Picayune's editorial entire:

The victims of the enormities we are about to present to the public, having seen Governor Kellogg's declaration of economy and reduction of expenses, inclose us one or two specimens of the experience they have had in such reduction. These consist of tax-bills on certain properties in Natchitoches parish, once rich estates, but now depreciated in value, almost abandoned, and very far from being worth the amounts at which they have been [illegible] The first bill reads as follows:

PARISH OF NATCHITOCHES, April 23, 1874.

Payne, [illegible] & Ridderby, City of New Orleans:

You are hereby notified that your State, special parish, and parish taxes for 1873 are now due, etc.:

Valuation	$11,615 00
State tax, 14½ mills	$168 28
Special parish tax, 40 mills	464 20
Parish tax, 20 mills	232 10
School tax, 2½ mills	29 02
Kearney tax, 2 mills	23 21
This notice	25
Total	$917 06

The second bill is on a tract of 1,800 acres of land in the same parish, assessed at $5,850. Not worth, now, half that sum. The same polite preliminaries, and then come the figures. It is [illegible] to say [illegible]; they amount, as in the case just quoted, to 79 mills!—8 per cent. of tax on property,—and that assessed too high!

Gov. Kellogg will doubtless call attention to his excellent law providing that the parish taxes shall not exceed the rate fixed for those of the State. Theoretically, the bill in these cases would have come to 29 mills,—3 per cent. Actually they came to 79 mills,—8 per cent.

This illustrates the difference between the Kellogg administration in the abstract and the concrete. One can do very pretty pleading in general terms,—the particulars are damning.

We do not forget that the case of these Natchitoches parish taxes was laid before Assistant Attorney General Dibble, and promptly decided to be extortionate and illegal; but we also remember that this only occurred after the tax-payers had risen up in their wrath, and ejected or forced to resign the officials who thus oppressed them. Gov. Kellogg paid some attention to the matter then,—not before. It is fair to doubt whether he ever would have done so had the infamy continued undisturbed.

The driving out of the Natchitoches parish officials was called by the official and semi-official journals of the State Government a "White League outrage."

It was from this that the beautiful fabric of disloyalty and rebellion took its rise. Here's where the murdered negroes came in, and the first alarm of Southern insurrection found its impulse.

That was all of it; these cormorants preyed upon the people until, to save themselves from utter devastation, they turned upon their persecutors. They hurt nobody. By some incomprehensible forbearance they limited their demands to the official abdication of these robbers. And on that act—an act which, if they fairly understood it, the Northern people would applaud without one dissenting voice—has been founded the calumny, and abuse, and misrepresentation, which to-day harms us more than the Kellogg Government itself.

It will probably be said by the organs that the Picayune is a Conservative paper, and therefore a "rebel sympathizer." We are content to let the figures fight their own battle, without needless comment.

A SAGACIOUS POLITICIAN.

After all the cursing up hill and down dale to which he has been treated by a good many indiscreet organs, Sam. Bowles can not give up wholly his admiration for the few honest Republican leaders who have escaped immolation by a servile press. Vice President Henry Wilson is an old friend of his, and Bowles never fails to give him a kindly word when he can do so. In a recent letter to the Springfield Republican Bowles says the Vice President has apparently nearly recovered from the effects of the severe nervous prostration of two years ago, and is resuming his old interest and pleasure in political discussion. He adds: "No man among the prominent Republicans here has a clearer and quicker instinct of the political situation than he. No man holds wiser views of the remedies for the Republican demoralization and danger. Some people suspect him of a thought for the next presidential nomination for himself. I don't know that this be so, I do know that there is more danger of making a worse nomination than hope of a better. His party in Massachusetts could not go into the canvass with a worthier candidate or truer representative. Were he President to-day, we would see such changes in party leadership and party policy as would invigorate its old forces and greatly impress the country."

The Mayor of Cincinnati has issued an order notifying the police of that city that "Whereas, by an act of the general assembly of Ohio, passed March 12, 1831, amended April 10, 1868, and again amended in 1871, the most severe penalties are imposed upon any person or persons who keep a house for the purpose of playing at keno, faro, or any other gambling device of that description; and whereas, in despite of these laws, and in despite also of the injurious effects which such houses exercise upon individual and public morality, it is believed that they do still largely exist in this city," he is determined to break up the practice. He calls on all captains of police to see that the law is strictly enforced, to enter houses and make arrests wherever they find games going on.

The Chicago Tribune can punch the President on provocation. Thus it says of Gen Emory's predicted removal: "General Grant has determined, it seems, to remove General Emory from New Orleans to St. Paul, and to make General Terry commander of a division in the South which shall embrace Mississippi, Louisiana and other States in which trouble is apprehended. General Emory is too intimately acquainted with the real condition of affairs in Louisiana to be a desirable commander there. His sympathies are too much involved. It may be necessary, before long, to change the troops, as well as their General."

COLD WEATHER ITEMS.

Keep your hydrants open these nights

A thousand and one icicles adorn the eaves

Rubber overshoes are the only balm against icy sidewalks

Blue nasal protuberances and tingling auricular appendages were more common than welcome yesterday

The present cold snap is certainly a great promoter of mental profanity among the male population and of mild (?) ejaculations among the ladies

An uncharitable wag at our elbow suggests that the surgeons of our city are rubbing their hands complacently with the prospect of plenty of dislocations and fractures to set

Wanted—forty thousand cart loads of anti lubricating material (sand or ashes) to sprinkle the sidewalks and doorsteps and thus prevent a crop of sprained limbs and fractured bones

It is refreshing to observe with what painful uncertainty pedestrians endeavored yesterday to preserve their equilibrium against the fearful odds of the sidewalks of more than glassy smoothness

An enterprising young America who could not wait for the surface of Giles lake to congeal undertook to skate on a plank sidewalk. His premature gyrations were brought to a sudden close with a sore head and badly sprained ankle Enterprise has its own reward

Two men who had not met for several weeks were seen to approach each other yesterday on First street with outstretched arms One exclaimed "Why, hullo old boy, I'm powerful glad to see you I wish you a happy New Y[illegible]" Up went his feet in a flash and the last word was pronounced in a recumbent position

These are glorious times for the boys who are converting the sidewalks into coasting grounds A thousand and one sleds were gliding about among the legs of pedestrians yesterday It didn't suit the pedestrians but then it made the youngsters happy and that ought to compensate for any amount of inconvenience experienced

Nothing is more aggravating than to lose your footing and pick yourself up with skinned elbows and shins But it is such a pleasant sight to see your neighbor who laughed at you perform a brief aerial flight—feet first—and quietly settle down Such a spectacular exhibition of gymnastics is gratifying in the extreme, the milk of human kindness to the contrary notwithstanding

Yesterday a keen northeaster took away a corpulent gentleman's hat While endeavoring to regain what was lost he lost that which was of infinite more importance than half a dozen chapeaus—his footing He wiggled squirmed and twisted like an eel threw his arms wildly about, but it wasn't any use for he couldn't resist gravitation He gravitated

In more instances than one the truth of the common expression "Just as easy as falling off a log" was demonstrated yesterday We interviewed a fellow who was sitting on the edge of the sidewalk puffing and vigorously caressing his shins who when we asked his opinion about the correctness of the above saying, blurted out with a forcible expletive that "he'd be blanked if it wasn't a blank sight easier"

Some evil minded wretches who thought they were doing the public a service sprinkled ashes on a number of aprons about the streets It made matters all the worse, for having once planted your brogans down on the ashes you could not for the world resist the temptation to sit down when you reached the icy sidewalk The ashes only inspired the credulous pedestrian with a confidence which was the prelude to a heavy fall

On one of the streets yesterday a couple were to be seen leaning in a loving manner on each other's arms Suddenly there was a break in the flow of conversation The pedal extremities of the interesting couple flew out at right angles and in quicker time than we can write they were floundering about on the ice The temptation was too great, and a loud and tantalizing ha, ha, went up from the throats of the spectators The man didn't swear, but his angry glance spoke volumes.

UP THE COLUMBIA.

THE WEATHER—POSTAL MATTERS

During the heavy east wind which prevailed [illegible]erday afternoon the O S N Co's telegraph line was prostrated at some point between this city and the Cascades We are therefore unable to obtain the usual weather report from the several points east of the mountains A man is to be sent along the line this morning and the necessary repairs will be made to the line By evening the line will doubtless be in operating condition

Latest intelligence from east of the mountains indicate no relaxation in the prevailing vigor of the weather Snow is reported to be one foot at Walla Walla, and the temperature was slowly descending At the Dalles the snow was eight inches deep, and the weather constantly growing colder Yesterday afternoon at 4 o clock (before the prostration of the line) the thermometer stood 15° at the Cascades There was some snow on the ground at that point, and considerable floating ice in the river

Between Portland and the Lower Cascades there is no ice in the river There are considerable quantities of floating ice between the Upper Cascades and the Dalles It was deemed imprudent to attempt to come down the river at the present state of the weather and the steamer Idaho and also the tug Teazer did not leave The Dalles yesterday morning The Oneonta and Otter left here as usual yesterday for the Cascades but failing to connect with the boats above were compelled to return Until the river becomes free from floating ice the Idaho will not attempt to make regular trips Yesterday evening after returning the Oneonta was sent to the bone-yard where she will remain for the present While the river remains open between here and the Cascades the Otter will continue to run, connecting with the mails from above

In consequence of the Teazer not being able to leave the Dalles yesterday morning, the mails were sent down on horseback The messenger, with the mail, left there for the Cascades at 12 M yesterday He will arrive at his destination to day, if the trail is passable, and connect with the Otter The mail which left this city yesterday morning for east of the mountains was enclosed in sacks such as are suitable for carrying conveniently on horseback On reaching the Cascades and finding the Teazer had not left above Mr Moody caused the mail to be placed on horses and started overland at once

Mr Moody who has the mail contract started for the Dalles yesterday morning to make all necessary arrangements for getting the mails through overland in the event of the permanent closing of the river

Mr B F Underwood, postal agent informs us that during the closing of the Columbia arrangements have been effected for a semi weekly mail service between Portland and The Dalles The mails will leave here on Monday and Thursday of each week It is calculated that the messenger can get through with 150 pounds of postal matter This will include the letter mail and the daily papers published in the city While the blockade continues the weekly papers will be temporarily excluded from the mails As long as the river is open between Portland and Cascades the Otter will run as often as may be necessary connecting with the overland mail from above Should the river entirely close the mails will have to be carried the entire distance on horseback

ELLENSBURG ITEMS

I find that the people of Oregon are somewhat ignorant in regard to this portion of the State In your last issue of the OREGONIAN you locate Port Orford in Coos county which is a mistake Another thing, I wish to call attention to why not have the northern mail for this place come by the way of Roseburg and Coos Bay to Port Orford and Crescent City? It is a better route in the winter and one week more early at any time as the mail formerly running between Crescent City and Jacksonville is now stopped Will the postal agent please make note of this?

The holidays have passed with a few periodical drunks

On the night of the 23d ult the schooner Jessie sank in the bay It is generally supposed that she got on her anchor She was laden with fish for San Francisco from the Columbia Salmon Company The same company silently folded their nets and stole away last fall across the mountains and dales to their homes in Iowa forgetting the little formality of settling with a portion of their employes

We have a new store being put up by Messrs Woodruff & Co of San Francisco and there is some talk of a large sawmill being started in the spring There is also a new black sand company commencing operations I hope they will succeed after so many failures of others They all say the gold is there but they fail to make it pan You will hear from us again in all probability ITEMS

SOCIAL EVENTS.

The reception given last evening at Good Templars hall by the young ladies to the members of the Philomathean Literary Society was a most enjoyable social affair

One of the most enjoyable events of the social season was the complimentary ball given last evening at the armory of the Portland Light Battery, by the members of that company There was a large attendance—in fact the hall was densely crowded—and every one enjoyed the pleasures of the evening to the fullest possible extent The interior of the hall was handsomely decorated with flags, pictures, etc, which added materially to the appearance of the animated scene. All the members of the company were present and we observed representatives of the several military organizations of the city who appeared in full uniform At a late hour this morning the dancers dispersed All who attended voted the affair a grand success and Capt Tom Mountain a "brick" in the bargain

BUSINESS NOTICES.

PAUSE WHILE YOU READ THIS! The season for parties and balls has arrived and the cold dreary days and nights of winter will soon visit us Every young man old man and boy for that matter likes to present a neat appearance when attending parties the theater or walking about the streets They likewise desire to be well provided against the cold blasts of snow and rain What contributes more to the personal appearance and comfort of a gentleman or boy than a nicely fitting suit of clothes set off with a heavy warm overcoat Why will any one be so foolish as to go without either when BECK & WALDMAN have everything in that line Beck & Waldman in laying in their immense fall and winter stock of Clothing have exercised great care and selected with reference to the demands of trade They have purchased their goods low and are determined not to be undersold Let the public note this fact

M. E. CHURCH AT SALEM.

Rev R Bentley of this city writes to the Advocate concerning the new Methodist church at Salem as follows

The edifice is of brick, the order of architecture Gothic and is built in the shape of a cross The whole is enclosed except the front gable, and arrangements are being made for its rapid completion The walls are ornamented with pilasters, which are to form small spires, rising several feet above the roof

In its external appearance it is very much like the First Congregational church (Dr Stone's) at San Francisco The building is in length, in the interior 98½ feet and in breadth at the center 58 feet, and at the ends of the building 42 feet wide

The basement of the building is completed and is entirely above ground The front entrance is by two massive double doors. You enter an ample vestibule on either side of which will be stairways leading to the main audience room, and under each stairway a room 14 feet square

From the vestibule we pass into the lecture or prayer or Sunday school room This room is 60 feet deep and for the most part 58 feet wide and will conveniently seat four hundred people Five hundred were accommodated on Sabbath morning Back of this lecture room is another room 13x42 feet which would be ample space for infant class room and library The height of the rooms from floor to ceiling, is 13 feet The whole basement is grained imitating a light white oak The rooms are well lighted by ample and beautiful windows of heavy glass manufactured in San Francisco expressly for the church The ingress and egress both in front and rear of the main room are ample The seats of the former church are placed temporarily in this room and being painted and grained afresh seem to be at home in the new edifice

On an ample platform to the rear of the room stands a pipe organ second only to the best musical instrument in the State Ample recesses have been left in the partition wall running between the vestibule and lecture room, for a large Sunday school library

When the Rev J H Roork began his work as agent very few were sanguine enough to suppose that he could relieve it from its embarrassments

LIABILITIES OF THE CHURCH

Old indebtedness	$15 000
Improvements since Conference	3 000
Total	$18 000

ASSETS

Collected by agent	$ [illegible] 000
Available subscription	[illegible]000
Amount raised at dedication	[illegible] 600
Total assets	$13 600
Balance indebtedness	4 400

Though more encouragement was given not mentioned here to meet the slight shrinkage that may occur from these subscriptions

The main audience room which is enclosed except the gables is 2[illegible] feet from floor to plate and 33 feet from floor to arch The flooring is down and the gas pipes are conveniently placed for their final attachments and fixtures It will take probably $1[illegible] 000 to complete it When finished it will accommodate 1 200 people and on a special occasion as at conference session or the university commencement could accommodate in its pews and ample galleries 1 [illegible]00 people

It might seem presumptuous when work has thus far been so well done and with a perseverance and self sacrifice rarely equaled to offer any suggestion yet we are impelled thereto by what seemed to us the short joists for the galleries We need scarcely advise that every stroke in that upper room should be guided by a skillful architect It would be better to wait if necessary in order to complete this magnificent room according to the exact details of the plans and specifications In this doubtless all are agreed

From a state of despondency our people at Salem have become greatly encouraged. The toils of Father Waller and of Bro Roork, the munificent gift of $2 500 by C C McCabe, and the gifts of a generous people find an appropriate monument in a substantial and beautiful church which is destined to rank among the first on the Pacific coast, and will be the sacred spot where coming generations in that City of Peace will learn of the efficacy of the cleansing blood"

The basement of this church was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God on Sunday, the third day of January by the writer assisted by Rev P M Starr the pastor J H Roork and C W Shaw Rev J L Parrish in behalf the trustees made the presentation

The Gorgones! were three celebrated sisters whose hairs were entwined with serpents they had wings of gold their heads were of brass their bodies covered with scales their teeth were as long as the tusks of a wild boar and they turned to stone all on whom they fixed their eyes They are mythological creations—but in these days there may be seen some women who are regardless of their person and adornments—they allow the charms which nature accords to all their sex their hair to become dishevelled unhealthy and finally to drop out when by the use of LYON'S KATHAIRON they could retain it in all its beauty and present to their lovers and husbands the witching grace of comeliness

Ear Ache is unquestionably the "King of the Forest" where pains grow It overtops tooth ache in its worst estate, and its victims declare that it almost maddens them Yet a few drops of the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT poured into the ear affords instant and what is far better permanent relief This preparation has been sold for thirty years and wherever tried is regarded as a specific for all neuralgic pains It may safely be used upon children of tender age It is to be found in any drug store on this continent and abroad as well

Our Climate has much to do with the complexion—our mode of living more What multitudes of ladies resort to powders and adulterations which they rub upon their necks and faces like kalsominers put whiting on disfigured walls forgetful that water will remove the covering and leave the skin unhealthy A remedy is offered in HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM which for so very many years has contributed to the beautification and health of the complexion and skin of American ladies

The greater number of persons afflicted with dyspepsia are to be found among care worn [illegible] stock brokers merchants and students with those confined to sedentary habits who neglect or have no opportunity to take sufficient exercise The use of the world renowned PLANTATION BITTERS will supply the wear and tear of the system and restore it to health

TOLD AT NIGHTFALL

It was a stormy September evening Guy Urquehart and my respected self—Charles Ellingstone painter—were sitting in the studio window of his delightful little villa at Frascati near Rome high over the rounded tops of woods now lurid in the red setting sun Beneath a leaden sky the gloomy Campagna stretched like a dead sea, and with its far rim cut the disc, a portentous blood-red ball slowly, slowly sinking

Guy and I had been old friends and school fellows in England He was two or three years older than myself, but that had made his friendship for me all the tenderer and mine for him reverential Besides I had looked on Guy as a kind of genial young saint I had always felt rather wicked in his company, because he really seemed, quite naturally never to do anything wrong or to have so much as a wrong thought He would have chosen art as his profession, I knew had he been allowed a voice in the arrangement of his own fortune but the bilious old father who ruled his destiny made a civil engineer of him, without the slightest reference to any possible fancy or protest of the lad's Naturally, he did not take kindly to his work, though he buckled to it conscientiously

When I came to Italy to study art Guy and I kept up a pretty brisk correspondence for about a twelvemonth But in my second Italian summer his letters suddenly ceased to arrive I wrote to him in vain hope of answer for six months and then let the correspondence go with a sigh

I easily ascertained that he was alive and well, but could find out nothing else about him that was more reliable than the gossip retailed out by certain English military men who had flapped their lazy flight across the sea one winter, and perched in Rome. 'Got into a scrape about a woman, and didn't behave well to her, or something of the sort,' drawled out one of these amiable gentleman And this was all I could discover about poor Urquehart.

But at last I heard from Guy himself once more, Lo! he had inherited a small fortune from a distant relation, he had thrown civil engineering overboard he was coming to Rome forthwith to study art in earnest at last, and we must spend the ensuing summer in Villeggiatura together eating figs at Tusculum At the time my story begins, he had been about six weeks in Rome, and had already painted one or two capital little pictures

No village in the world drives such a roaring trade in scandal as grand old Rome You have seen how Urquehart's character went before him, as Sir Teazle's stayed behind, for the comfort of the community, and what mercy it met with Now, when circumstances are served up in this mixed way, there are generally certain facts which one may trace like pebbles through disturbing waves I felt convinced that I should do so in Urquehart's case, if it ever pleased him to give me his confidence.

But I could not try to thrust myself into any chamber of his past not freely opened to me I could not help guessing that there was a shut and locked door behind which lurked the solution of a mystery This mystery was the great and grievious change in my friend, not to be accounted for by the mere lapse of two or three years And this change was all the more remarkable that it was not always obvious No two men could be more unlike than Urquehart to Urquehart in different moods It seemed to me as if much evil had flowed in to his heart by some rent where much good had run out, but that the poison had never mixed with the healthy juice of his life

On this September evening as we sat together, Guy had been muttering some very bad sentiments, which would have grieved me more if I had not attributed them in part to some unripe peaches and the state of his stomach

"Guy," said I, suddenly, "I've found a key to much that makes people gape and stare at you"

"What do you mean?" returned he, rather roughly.

"Most persons," I went on, "are half angel, half devil, they say But your angel and devil seem to share their lodgings on the most curious terms of mutual forbearance They seem to take you turn and turn about, in watches, as it were. Your angel never torments your devil, or interferes with his mode of enjoying himself, his Walpurgis nights with his man, and your devil, with equal politeness, never intrudes himself on the angel's [illegible] things. They could not possibly come in contact without disturbing the harmony of the system but they seem to agree to differ, like certain polite married couples"

Urquehart took his pipe from his mouth and blew out a long smoke-wreath Then he leaned head and shoulders out of the window and stared far away at the sun, now like a clot of blood on the livid horizon, till even that crimson [illegible] was absorbed Then he brought himself back to his former position in a corner of the rickety old sofa, and from that dusky corner spake

'You hooked a fine, fat fish there my young friend, with your moral critical line Your sagacity really deserves patting for having snapped such a good head of game Still, you don't know how the devil got into me, how should you? He had hardly set claw on your friend when we were boys together, and I rather the better boy of the two'

'You may well say that, old fellow! At that time (and what a little time ago it is after all!) you really seemed incapable of evil or even of comprehending it You trusted everybody implicity, because you yourself were—'

"An ass!" roared Urquehart, "And now listen"

So, as the night fell, and "the casement slowly grew a glimmering square" in the blackness, Urquehart's tale was told

"Fourteen months ago, I was lodging for the summer in a farm house in a village no matter where The only house there belonging to the gentlefolks, except the wretched old parsonage, was 'Squire Ringwood's It was a big, stupid-looking mansion, on a hill, staring down overbearingly at the poor little tenements huddled together below; and the burly Squire himself was all in the world like his house, as he sat on his tall horse, and looked down pompously over his vast waistcoat at a frightened crew of village children The 'Squire had an ugly, sickly wife and daughter and they had an humble companion that was an angel of beauty I fell in love with her at church. Oh, the little church in the west countrie, hid in the bowery orchard hollow! Oh, the sudden delicious gust that littered the graves with blossoms!—your mother's grave, Charley, has the dear woman the violets I planted there? or did they die like the faith and hope she set in me? I fell in love with Fanny Vale before I knew her name I learned that from the farm house folks with whom I lodged. They told me, moreover, that she was a young widow, and still in weeds when she came to lodge very humbly in the village six months before, that the 'Squire's wife and daughter had taken a fancy to her, and had adopted her into their family, as a kind of reader and useful companion of all work I made her acquaintance by a note which I threw at her feet over a hedge, the first time I spied her walking alone I need not swear to you that I never had an evil wish or thought about her To me a woman was a holy thing desecrated by no lowness of condition, deserving of any gentleman's love and reverence, if endowed with certain qualities These qualities I now took on trust, and being enchanted by her beauty, saw also the perfection of moral loveliness in her face Such an angelic face Charlie! There she sat in the 'Squire's pew, beside her ugly patroness, with such intelligence in her melancholy blue eye and her half moon of brow such a breathing sensibility in her silence and when I came to know her what sympathy in her smile what silken manners so soft graceful caressing, yet modest and full of suave dignity! She did not answer my note but when I went to the copse behind Ringwood House where I had implored her to meet me, she was there She said she had only to beg me to come and write no more She was a poor dependent and the least suspicion falling on her would cast her homeless and friendless on the world I will not dwell on the stale love story it was perfectly commonplace of its kind, excepting that the dupe was not, for once the simple beauty but the gentleman from London She consented to be my wife, and at the summer's end, without asking her a single question as to her past without knowing more of it than the farm folk had volunteered to tell me the first day I saw her I brought this girl to London and married her That's what came of being too good for this world incapable of evil or the comprehension of it I had written to tell my father of my intended marriage I frankly confessed a perfectly obscure and penniless young woman, that had, of course everything but position and wealth to recommend her I wrote a respectful letter, which I received back in a blank cover Yet my heart yearned to the cross grained old man, and from the joy and glory of my fool's paradise I emerged voluntarily, before the honeymoon was over, to seek a reconciliation with my father

'When I got to his door he drove me away like a beggar like a strange dog with his lifted stick with his mouth full of curses That is the last I ever saw of him He died six months after implacable!

'I hurried back to town to be comforted by the angel in my house I returned sooner than I was looked for I opened the door by a latch key and went softly up stairs to surprise my wife It was about 3 in the afternoon Our little drawing room had folding doors which were now ajar No one was in the front room but I heard—I heard my wife's voice in the other I heard her voice and a man's, I had but to step forward and I saw—'

It was quite dark by this time and here the voice that had come out of the pall at's black corner suddenly broke into a sob

'Don't go on until I [illegible]'

'Let me alone' gasped Urquehart savagely In less than a minute he resumed sternly

'I saw my wife with her arms around a man's neck! She was passionately entreating him not to leave her he was trying to release himself The next moment they saw me and started apart Then instantly my wife that tender angel flung her at me like a wild cat She did not scream but through her shut teeth she said 'I'll kill you I'll kill you, if you touch him!' Her blue eyes glared much like yonder blue lightning that keeps flashing, out there, and something glittered close to my face She had snatched up her scissors and I verily believe would have dug them into my temple if the man her lover had not come and pulled down her hand She was going to fall into his arms again but he put her from him not very gently, and told her to sit down She obeyed him instantly I cannot in the least describe my state of mind all this time which was only a minute or two I suppose My impression is that I had ceased to feel that, if my brain and heart had been scooped out I could not have been emptier of emotion and thought that I was not conscious of any vindictive rage or any transport of despair Some people may think I ought to have kicked that man down stairs I neither did so, nor felt any desire to hurt him It was he who took the initiative and made me a sign to go into the front room with him, which I did Then when I stood there face to face with him, I said, suddenly, and, as it were involuntarily

'Who are you?'

"I am sorry for you said he in a gentle drawl looking at me quite compassionately 'this woman has treated you very badly Still you know, you have only yourself to thank Your conduct has been quite inconceivably rash, you know—

'Who are you?' I repeated, staring at him bluntly

'I am Captain Edward Ringwood This woman is an actress who I became acquainted with about a year or two before you first saw her I assure you I know nothing of your love affair or proposed marriage If I had known in time, I should certainly have considered it my duty to warn you of the awful blunder you were making When I went abroad with my regiment, it seems she chose to go down and wriggle herself into my family What her motive was I can't imagine She is a most artful, dangerous person, that is clear She saw my return to England in the papers yesterday and sent me a note inviting me to come and see her at this address which I did I give you my word of honor I had not been here ten minutes when you made your appearance She had just told me she was married and this was your house upon which I got up and wished her good day

'By this time I had found myself unable to stand, and was sitting on the sofa with my head between my hands When Capt Ringwood left off speaking I looked up meaning to say something, but forgot what it was and only stared at him silently

'He was a fair, slight young man about 30, with handsome, thin features and large light brown whiskers He stood there looking at me with the same good natured concern in his face that he had expressed in words, in his fashionable affected way

At last I recollected what I had been going to say and told him I wished to be left alone He silently took out his card, laid it on the chimney piece and went out

'I don't know how many hours I remained lying on the sofa with my eyes shut in that strange torpor but it was night when I opened them and found my wife standing by me She had lighted the candles on the chimney piece, and was stooping down over me She started upright as my eyes opened but she did not avoid them She confronted me arching back her nymph like figure, and leaning back on a table behind her I felt no emotion at sight of her, but looked at her as if she had been a picture Her beauty was splendid. All her fair golden hair was turned off her white face in a sort of glittering aureola Her great turquois blue eyes flared under slightly contracted brows the nostrils of her delicate, straight nose and her infantine mouth expressed rage and pain

"'I am glad you are awake,' said she, 'I want you to hear me say I hate you!'

"'I don't care,' said I, wearily 'Go away

Her face flamed out with the fury that was burning her heart

'But you do care!' she cried, "you shall care! I tell you I always laughed at you and despised you I only married you from pique—because he left me I got into his family and toadied them, and made myself their servant, only to hear of him and to feel nearer him and be where he had been—I love him so I love no one else in the world—I never did I will kill you and a dozen like you to save him from a finger ache I would rather a thousand times have a blow from him than a kiss from you—a hundred million times! When I think of him and that you are between us I hate you—I abhor you! How dare you smile at me? I'll kill you!'

I was quite unconscious of smiling, but she darted at me and struck at my throat I caught her hand this time she had a penknife in it and I felt that she had pricked me That instinctive act of self-defense roused me, and probably saved my wits as well as my life When I had mastered her and thrown the knife away, I held her hands in mine until she put down her face and bit them savagely I tied her wrists with my pocket handkerchief, and she sank panting on a chair All of a sudden the unhappy creature burst out crying as if her heart was broken—as it well might be Probably Ringwood's cool treatment of her throughout the interview recently passed was at the bottom of that frenzy of vituperation that desperate behavior toward me She did not hate me, but was simply mad with pain, and raved and struck out in her delirium I think she really liked me when she married me, notwithstanding her assertion to the contrary and meant and wished to lead a new life but the sight of Ringwood's name in the papers and the knowledge of his nearness in my absence, revived her passion for him in which her good resolutions burnt like straw I released her hands and brought water and put it to her lips and when she was quiet through exhaustion I advised her to lie down, and hoped she would go to sleep. As I was leaving the room she called me back, in a low broken voice and when I stood beside the sofa on which she lay she joined her hands and asked me with streaming eyes, to forgive her I did so, freely Of course, Ringwood was right, I had no one but myself to thank My infatuation had been so monstrous that I could no more complain of the consequences than a man sober can complain of the consequences of some drunken folly

In the morning I took Fanny away to a farm house in Kent a place she knew of and chose herself for a retreat She was quiet and humble, and apparently broken spirited But she did not remain there a month nor do I know whither she went or where she has been ever since Before she left she wrote me a long letter expressing her remorse at her behavior toward me 'But as I am,' ended she 'I will never trouble you more I do implore you to be sure of that, and to forget me, or think of me as dead.'

'I'm afraid to think of her at all I made every possible effort to trace her quite in vain and I hardly know where would be the good if I succeeded

'That's all' added Urquehart, after a moment's pause, 'and there's the history of your friend and the wife of his bosom and if you still wonder how or when my devil got into me I don't I believe you love me enough to think he is not so black a devil as he is painted I am not the kind of man in whose heart such a gash could be made and heal and leave no mark For a long while this world seemed and often does seem really an Inferno nothing but plunging and breaking one's heart in a swamp of suffering with intervals of quiet from mere exhaustion and despair O Charley how I wished your mother had been alive! I wanted some kind woman that was honest and pure about me, we men all do in our dark hour Basta!—let us go down to the drawing room, and your friends, and the lamp By Jove what a flash! There's a mighty storm brewing, young fellow "

The specie paying journals of the Eastern States are still complaining of the drain of coin from this country to Europe and [illegible] that though the balance of trade was not less than $150 000,000 more favorable to the United States for the year 1874 than it was in 1873 the constant flow of specie from New York to the continent and Great Britain continues as large as ever and during the last five weeks of the year just closed ten millions in coin left New York for Europe and the supply is thereby so reduced as to be entirely inadequate to the legitimate demands of the trade of such a port as the American metropolis The Tribune claims that these facts [illegible] demonstration of the absurdity of expecting to increase our supply of coin by rectifying the balance of trade and says they are a reminder of the inconveniences to which the trade of the country is subjected by the persistent refusal of the United States to make any use of the precious metals as money The gold market with the present restricted supply of coin can easily be manipulated by speculators, and we need not say that the controlling motive with them is not the welfare of the mercantile community

The true explanation of the continued call for coin for exportation is the direction which the savings of the country are now taking. For some years there has not been such a disposition on the part of savings banks insurance companies and individuals to invest in United States bonds The six per cent bonds which are called in for payment in the process of funding nearly all come from Europe and the fives of the funded loan which take their place we are happy to say have been absorbed in large quantities by American investors In this way our internal bond indebtedness is reduced It should also be said that the field for the employment of money in new enterprises such as railroads factories etc is now unusually restricted and the investment of a portion of the savings of the people necessarily takes the form of a repurchase from Europe of some of the securities we have sold there in such vast quantities during the war The state of the European money markets is always favorable to the movement we have described The influences being of a comparatively permanent character their natural effect will be to increase the value of gold as compared with the paper money prices of the articles we sell for foreign export If we increase our sales we must reduce our prices The securities imported can only be paid for by commodities exported and it is self evident since the entire commercial supply of gold in the Atlantic States is not in the least excessive that not much more of that commodity can be spared whatever may be the wishes of the European banks
